We Need You Now

MCS International launched as a work in progress on the 3rd of December 2005; the 21st anniversary of the world's worst chemical disaster in Bhopal, India. Our vital mission is to campaign hard towards the achievement of the following:

(1) Full medical and social recognition of MCS and other forms of Chemical Injury as real physical illnesses.

(2) For the removal of all toxic chemicals from our air, water, and food, and from our domestic, work, social, and wild environments.

We also aim to provide a comprehensive information, resource, and support service for the growing army of the chemically injured everywhere.

If you can help us then please visit our Join Us web pages and apply online today. Take a stand - and make a difference!

The screenshot shows the MCS-International.Org website. At the top, it says "MCS-International.Org" with the tagline "Bringing the hidden dangers of modern synthetic chemicals out into the Light - worldwide." Below this is a "Join us!" button and a "Website Under Construction" notice. The main content area is titled "Our Homepage" and includes a "Welcome to MCS International" message. There are several featured sections: "Volunteer Representatives" (calling for a campaign), "Too Health Day Items" (listing health tips like avoiding toxic chemicals and activating the body), "Free Prof Hooper DVD" (a documentary on MCS), "We Remain Silent" (a video by Kevin Moran), and "Engaging With MCS" (a book by Professor Malcolm Hooper). Each section has a "More info" or "Download it here" link. At the bottom, there is a navigation menu and copyright information.

The Tide Is Definitely Turning!

Greenpeace, the World Wildlife Fund, Friends Of The Earth, Environmental Working Group; everywhere you look people and whole organisations are waking up to the very real and rapidly escalating health and environmental dangers from ubiquitous toxic chemicals.

Change, however, is not going to come easily. Powerful vested interests, with much to lose, are going to do all in their very considerable power to maintain the existing and staggeringly profitable status quo. And that has to be challenged - hard.

The existing momentum for change, from "dangerous and toxic" to "safe and natural", needs first to be broadened and accelerated to the extent that a sufficient critical mass of "awareness" is reached in the public consciousness to allow it to spontaneously function as an inevitable catalyst for real change. Only then will the poisoning of the planet - and everything on it - finally be ended once and for all.
